DEMOCRACY, RULE OF LAW, CONSTITUTIONAL IDENTITY

Democracy and the rule of law are key foundations for society. Today's legal theories offer various interpretations of these concepts, and contemporary political movements present sharply different takes on how democracy and the rule of law should be implemented. National constitutions and political cultures remain distinctive, but debates aimed at achieving consensus on fundamental democratic values continue. How does globalisation accommodate the constitutional identity of particular societies?

Courses taught by professors from the U.S. and the EU.
No tuition fee for students from our partner institutions.
You pay only an application fee of 200 € (early bird 100 € until 1 March, 2019) plus your travel, accommodation and food.
